ACADEMIC DRESS

The academic dress of robe, hood, and mortarboard is derived from the regular costume of medieval students. Since they were nearly all priests or monks in training, the students wore long clerical robes with warm hoods to keep out the drafts in their chilly halls and chapels. This dress became distinctly a student's uniform in thirteenth-century England. As the English college passed from under church control, the robes and hoods became more colorful. Today, English academic dress is known for its brilliant scarlet robes and hoods.

America borrowed the idea from England without, at first, the bright colors. As early as 1880, many colleges had their own colors and shapes for the gowns of the different degrees. During that decade, colleges began to dress their students, faculty, and trustees in robes because it made the graduation ceremonies more impressive and increased the attendance. By 1893, the situation had become so chaotic that a large number of colleges appointed a commission to draft a uniform code for the wearing of caps, gowns and hoods. The 1895 code, with some revision in 1960, is in force today.

All students in today's ceremony will be wearing the bachelor's gown without the hood since they will be receiving the associate degree in arts or sciences. The full bachelor's dress includes the hood three feet in length, and the mortarboard cap. The master's gown is similar to the bachelor's in general shape but has either no sleeves or long trunk-like flaps underneath the sleeve. The master's hood is three and one-half feet long. The doctor's gown is fuller and has long velvet panels draped around the neck and stitched down the front edges. The doctor's hood is four feet long and rounded at the bottom. You may see these distinctions in the academic dress of the faculty.

The inside of the hood is lined with the color of the college or university attended. If there are two official colors, they may be arranged in a chevron design. The holder of the hood carries the color of the department or field of learning.

THE MACE

The ceremonial mace is a tradition at commencement. Carried by a designated Marshal, it symbolizes the authority by which the College grants degrees.

During today's ceremony, the College will retire its old mace and will officially install a new mace. In honor of the College's 50th Anniversary celebration, the new mace was designed for the College by Michaelann Tostanoski, Professor, Arts and Humanities at the Michael J. Grant Campus. Research on the original lighthouse design was completed with the help of MaryPat Takacs, member of the adjunct library faculty.

The Fire Island Lighthouse served as the original inspiration for the College's logo. In creating the design for the 50th Anniversary Mace, Professor Tostanoski again used this enduring Long Island symbol. The mace's lighthouse is made of light and dark wood, meant to capture a sense of the light being shed by the lighthouse beacon, pointing the way to success. Blue light emanates from the lens of the lighthouse. This symbolizes the light of knowledge, illuminating and coloring the way for those graduating from Suffolk County Community College as they follow their life paths. Finally, the base under the lighthouse holds three identical copies of the College's Official Seal—one seal on each of three facets—honoring the three campuses of our one College.

The historic mace will be carried by Alumni Marshal, Professor John C. Gallagher, who will lead the procession of alumni representing each of the College's previous graduating classes. The new mace will be carried by today's Grand Marshal, Professor Michaelann Tostanoski, who will lead the procession of graduates from the College's class of 2010. Both the retired mace and the new mace will be displayed during today's commencement ceremony.
