

At-Risk Students: Understanding Their Challenges

Understanding the needs of at-risk students is becoming extremely crucial to our work as educators and facilitators at the College. This workshop will focus on two academic at-risk programs, Educational Opportunity Program and the Student Support Services Program. Teri Morales, Counselor, Educational Opportunity Program and Monica Lozano, Case Manager, Student Support Services Program, will discuss the challenges at-risk students face everyday and how we can assist them in reaching their academic goals. Participants will learn about the academic support programs, the program population, the complex challenges faced by the students and how we can better serve them in and out of the classroom setting.
