

Forming Effective Partnerships in the First Year Student Experience

Maximizing student and faculty interaction during the first year of college is key to reducing attrition and maximizing academic performance. Please join Jian Zhang, College Associate Dean for Student Success, as she presents a webcast which will instruct you how to form effective partnerships and meaningfully involve the entire college community in the first year student experience. Several examples of institutions that have had success in this area will be shared for actionable ideas. Everybody involved with the implementation of first year programs will benefit from this webcast; this includes those who teach freshman seminars or introductory courses and who are involved in orientation, advising, various intervention programs and others.
